The book series Studies of the Ferenc Mádl Institute seeks to publish the most significant and intriguing results of the researches conducted by colleagues of the Ferenc Mádl Institute of Comparative Law in English. The primary goal of the series is to authentically present and address legal issues which arise related to the Central and Eastern European region, taking into account the particular legal traditions and culture of the countries therein. Therefore this series is a good platform to cooperate with Central European Academy. The series also aims to provide insights and detailed analyses of certain legal topics regarding the countries outside the Central and Eastern European region. Furthermore its purpose to encompass titles which are monographic studies of the researchers of Ferenc Mádl Institute of Comparative Law. The books published in the series are written for both academics and legal practitioners who are interested in contemporary legal problems related to Central and Eastern European countries.
